Assembly / Data info Credits

Before this wiki was started most of the information was already documented in various text files scattered around the web. Hacking webpages may go down after a few years of activity and information can be lost, this is one of the reasons we have set up this wiki. Here is a list of people that helped FF3us documentation and R&D significantly over the years and a little description of their main contributions based on the documents used for the wiki pages of this section. If information is missing or is innacurated, you can change it or notice a wiki user. In no particular order:

Yousei
