

Description

This is our available songs to copy to FF3us 1.0, 1.1 or FF6j. Each archive contains a spc file of the song, a binary file of the song data and a binary file of the song instruments. Some archives have other file, as an example emberling always provide all of the 3 above but can also include a version to use with the instrument patch, a MML file, readme or files to use with other utilities. You can also listen to a 30 seconds song preview on this page.

if it's your first time uploading or updating a song here, we suggest you read the upload guidelines before making any move. You can also ask question or make an upload notice in this forum thread.

Instrument Patch

The songs with a “p”, a majority of the ones made by tsushiy, require the following patch to work properly because they use partially or totally non-vanilla FF6 instruments. Some songs by emberling also use this patch, but a “nopatch” version of the song is always provided in these cases. Sadly some submissions by tsushiy requiring the instrument patch have instruments in the instruments bin file higher than max instrument, likely because his hack use more instruments than what he first submitted. This is not all songs requiring the instrument patch though but we have not documented which ones are concerned.

Gi Nattak Songs Note

A recent discovery about a command that was left out of all Gi Nattak songs here done via MML was brought to our attention. There's a command that FF6's music engine uses to reset the reverb value between songs, it is actually needed or else the reverb from the previously played song will continue over to the next. We will attempt at some point to add in the command to all songs and re-upload them. It's also possible to manually add in the command, then to adjust the song's pointers and jumps. Alternatively, you can just remove/replace ALL INSTANCES of the F7 xx xx (and F8 xx xx if you want) commands from ALL SONGS so it will no longer carry over the previous songs' reverb setting.

Also, all Gi's songs have a transpose up +1 command (D9 01) in every track, because he thought for all these years that it was supposed to be there in the channel header, having used the same template found online that had this transpose +1 command included, until just recently that it was brought to his attention. So, everything is transposed up the smallest value, creating a slightly higher pitch. We plan to also correct this in the future as well, but if you wish to do it yourself just find the D9 01 command in every track and change it to D9 00 (zero value) and you're back to the normal pitch.

* Songs with author marked with * are originally arranged by the noted author for Gi Nattak's Return of the Dark Sorcerer, an enormous hack with a fully custom soundtrack that makes extensive use of custom instruments and has its own distinct instrumentation style. The marked songs have been modified by someone other than the original author (probably emberling) for compatibility with generic FF6 projects, including reinstrumentation (often aiming closer to the original song's style) and closing up a few potential pitfalls like the echo issue noted above.
